SCHOOL TEACHERS' SALARIES.

irs. Blake on the Proposed Reduction

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:-Your admirable editorial on the suggestion that the Board of Education proposes to reduce the salaries of the teachers in our public schools emboldens me to say a word on the subject, especially in behalf of teachers of my own sex. There is every danger that if the reduction does take place, upon them, as in all similar cases in the past, there will fall the severest measure of the cruel economy. Unrepresented as the women teachers are on the Board, there is a large probsufferers, especially as in former years, when an advance in salary has been given, it has been in the proportion y per cent to the men and only ten per cent to the women, while reductions have been made in the opposite ratio, or twenty per cent re-duction for women and only ten per cent for men. The monstrous disproportion that there is be-tween the salaries of men and women teachers is your own paper:—
Male principals of departments of 150 to 300 pupils. $2,500
Female principals of departments of 150 to 300

ale principals of departments of 300 to 500 pupils. 2,750 male principals of departments of 300 to 500 pupils. 2,750 pupils.

Hale vice principals have a salary of Female vice principals have a salary of Male assistant teachers' average salary
Female assistant teachers' average salary.

Parties assistant teachers' average salary. 1.80
Female assistant teachers' average salary. 1.80
It will be seen that for performing precisely the same work women teachers receive but little more than hall what men teachers are given, and that the rises in salary are in a totally different ratio for women and men; there is great danger that the reduction will be in a similar ratio but reversed, taking more from the mulcted pittance the women receive than from the ample salaries of the men. That there is good cause to apprehend this, a single lact will show. The Free College for young men in this city has two literary societies in it, the members of which meet weekly for debates, &c. The Normal College for young women has also two literary and debating societies, conducted in a similar manner. I speak of my own knowledge when I say that these last are well ordered and very valuable in developing literary and orstorical ability among the girls. Formerly the Board of Education allowed $2.0 a year apiece to each of these four societies. About a year ago they withdrew the donation to the two societies of the Normal College, while continuing it to the boys' societies at the Free College.

Hoping that you will anord space to this word of protest and raise your own powerful voice against this and any other act of injustice, I am respectively yours. Lillie Deverseux Blakke.

German and French in the Public Schools. TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD :-

At least one member of the Board of Education will be glad to see by an editorial in your issue of an the opinion that the above mentioned studies should form no part of the general course of instruction in our common schools. I allude to Commissioner Baker, who has advocated the exclusion of these and some other superfluous branches ever since he became a member of the Board. Nor is he quite alone in this belief. There are a few more in the Board who think and vote as he does on this subject. Unfortunately for the cause of thoroughness in English, however, they are greatly in the minority, as the Board is at present constituted. If Commissioner Baker would find earnest allies, and plenty of them too, to support his opinion, let him seek them first among the teachers themselves. and secondly, through the press, among all classes of true American citizens. It is perfectly safe to assert that nine-tenths of the principals, and a still greater proportion of the rank and file in the profession, would vote for the immediate discontinuance of the studies in most of the public schools. Were these branches taught in a few schools in some lavored localities where parents are able to send their children to school year after year, long enough to attain a reasonable degree of proficiency in these as well as the English branches, it would, perhaps, be well enough. At present almost every grammar department has one if not both of these branches on its course of studies; the children of rich and poor alike—those who may attend school and college till twenty-one and those who must go to work as bread-winners at ages ranging from ten to lourteen years—are obliged to devote hour after hour every week to the acquisition of a loreign language, when, from the very nature of the circumstances, a great majority of them will mever become good scholars in reading, spelling, writing and arithmetic, to say hothing of geography, history, grammar, vocal music, drawing, philosophy, astronomy, algebra and a half dozen other things that teachers are commanded to teach and pupils are expected (?) to learn. It is high time that a little sound common sense should be brought to bear on this subject, I shall rejoice to see the press and the public arise in their majesty and do away with this and a few other kmored evils ioreed upon the public schools. It may not suit the Germans; it may not satisf the French; it may not please the rich man who keeps his children in the public schools til they are men and women grown, not only because these institutions, in his opinion, are the best in the world, but because they can be graduated through both school and college "without money and with-out price." But the schools were not lounded for are able to send their children to school year are men and women grown, not only because these institutions, in his opinion, are the best in the world, but because they can be graduated through both scaloid and college "without money and without price." But the schools were not founded for the particular satisfaction or benefit of either Germans, French or millionnaires, but for the enlightenment or the whole American people, especially in the ordinary branches of an Ergishe deducation.

The Evening High School is an institution devoted largely to these extra branches. It would be well for the Board of Education to begin retrenchment by doing away with this "pet institution" altogether. Or, before the ordinary teachers' average salary of $10 or $12 per week is cut down on the score of economy, it would be well to reduce the sataries of this close corporation of extraordinary teachers from $5 an light to $3, the sum pand to experienced teachers in the other evening schools. The Principal of the Evening High School is paid $10 per hight, and each assistant is paid $8; and then, to make this wonderfully good thing as lat as possible, the term is lengthened out six or eight weeks longer than the term of the other evening school are paid too much, or the other evening school are paid too much, or the other evening school are paid too much, or the other evening school are paid too much, or the other evening school are paid too much, or the other evening school far evening school three thousand pupils, and who manages a school of twenty-live or thirty teachers, having an average attendance of 1,000 pupils or more, is paid the princely sum of $6 per night for 100 lights; it the average is only $99 the want of one pupil more on the average register costs that unlucky pedagogue just $100—in other words he will receive but $5 per night. But the teachers of such common things as arithmetic, writing and bookkeeping, as well as toose who teach French and German, each receives the sung sum of $5 per night or the high evening school. Now, I do not object to good salaries f

THE ST. MARY'S.

The Nautical School-Good Sailors To Be Made Under the Auspices of the Board of Education.

The United States ship St. Mary's, which has been detailed as a schoolsnip for the use of the Board of Education of this city by the Navy Department, will arrive in this port about the 1st prox. and proceed to the wharf assigned her by the Department of Docks. It is gratifying to note that the plan to establish a nantical school wherein pupils could be properly trained in seamanship and taught the science of navigation has met with general approbation. The matter has received the most careful consideration, and it is believed that the results of the undertaking will finally have a very benefi-cial effect on our mercantile marine. The want of such an institution as that about to be established under the auspices of the Béard of Education has long been felt, and, should the intentions and arrangements of its promoters be fultilities and arrangements of its promoters be fultilities and arrangements of its promoters be fultilities our mercantile marne. And it may be mentioned that a better crait than the St. Mary's could not have been selected for the purposes of a mantical school. She will, of course, require some alterations and repairs; but in every respect she is well fitted for the important duty for which she has been selected. Although by no means a new vessel she is stanch and roomy, her tonnage being about 156, and her displacement 1,025. She carries sixteen guns, and has made several long cruises, having been detailed to the Pacific squadron for some years. Of late she has been lying at the Norfotk Navy Yard, from whence she proceeded to Boston, where she is now stationed. As previously mentioned the special committee intrusted with the carrying out of this project consists of Messrs, Joseph seligman, David Whetmore, William Dowd, A. J. Mattnewson and J. D. Vermilye. The sum of $50,000 was asked as an appropriation for the first year, but the Board of Apportionment have not as yet taken any definite steps in the matter. So soon, however, as the vessel arrives prompt action will be taken, as the special committee are determined to open the school without delay, it is Béard of Education has long been feit, and, should the intentions and arrangements of its promoters not yet known where the St. Mary's will be stationed, but practice cruises will be the order during the summer months. The studies will, of course, include the usual branches of education appertaining to seamanship, while attention will also be paid to other departments generally taught at the public schools. A knowledge of gunnery will be included, not so much to prepare the students for the navy as to secure a well trained reserve force should the occasion arise for their services. The candidates for admission must not be under fifteen years of age, and must show an aptitude for sealife. The term of study will embrace a period of from eighteen months to two years, no charge being made either for board or education, and as only a fair knowledge of the profession could be obtained in the time mentioned those desiring to pursue their studies after their terms have expired will be taken charge of by the Board of Education and prepared for taking positions as captains, first officers and second officers of vessels. The main idea of imparting instruction on board the St. Mary's is to make good saliors, so that the very fact of graduating from that vessel will be a guarance to shipping men of the efficiency of all applicants from her for positions. There will be room for 200 pupils. In a few days the committee will publish a prospectus giving all the necessary information on the subject.
